BWV 6 Bleib bei uns denn es will Abend werden

1 Coro (SATB, Oboe I/II, Oboe da caccia, Strings, Continuo)
Bleib bei uns,
denn es will Abend werden,
und der Tag hat sich geneiget.

Aria A Oboe da caccia, Continuo
Hochgelobter Gottessohn,
Laß es dir nicht sein entgegen,
Dass wir itzt vor dem Thron
Eine Bitte niederlegen:
Bleib, ach bleibe unser Licht,
Weil die Finsternis einbricht.

Choral S Violoncello piccolo, Continuo
Ah, bleib mit uns, Herr Jesu Christ,
Weil es nun Abend worden ist,
Dein göttlich Wort, das helle Licht,
Laß ja bei uns auslöschen nicht.
In dieser letzten, betrübten Zeit
Verleih uns, Herr, Beständigkeit,
Dass wir dein Wort und Sakrament
Rein b’halten bis an unser End.

Recitativo B Continuo
Es hat die Dunkelheit
An vielen Orten überhand genommen.
Woher ist das kommen?
Bleib, aber, weil sowohl die Kleinen als die
Großen Nicht in Gerechtigkeit Vor dir, o Gott, gewandelt Und wider ihre Christenpflicht gehandelt. Drum hast du auch den Leuchter umgestoßen.

Aria T Violino I/II, Viola, Continuo
Jesus, lass uns auf dich sehen,
Dass wir nicht
Auf den Sündenwegen gehen.
Laß das Licht
Deines Worts uns heller scheinen
Und dich jederzeit treu meinen.

Choral SATB, instruments colla parte
Beweis dein Macht, Herr Jesu Christ,
Der du Herr aller Herren bist;
Beschirm dein arme Christenheit,
Dass sie dich lob in Ewigkeit.

Chorus
Stay with us,
for evening is coming
and the day draws to an end.

Aria
Most praiseworthy Son of God, Let it not be against your will
that we now before your throne
lay down a request:
Stay, ah stay as our light,
for darkness is falling.

Chorale
Ah, stay with us, Lord Jesus Christ,
for evening is coming.
Your divine word, that bright light,
Let it not be extinguished in us.
In these last, troubled times
grant us, Lord, perseverance that we may keep your word & sacrament pure until our end comes.

Recitative
Darkness has spread
over many places.
How has this happened?
Put simply: both the lowly and the great
have not walked in righteousness before you, O God and have acted against their Christian duty. Therefore you also have removed their candlestick.

Aria
Jesus, let us look to you
so that we may not walk along the way of sin.
Let the light of your word shine more brightly upon us and may you at all times be truly (within us).

Chorale
Show your might, Lord Jesus Christ,
you who are the Lord of lords;
protect your poor Christian folk,
so that they may praise you for ever.

Luke 29:24 Abide with us: for it is toward evening, and the day is far spent. (KJV)

John 1.5 The light shines in darkness...
John 1.9 ... the true light that enlightens everyone ...

Rev 2.5 ... repent ... else I will come unto thee and remove your candlesticks

Psalm 119.105 Thy word is a lamp to my feet and a light to my path.

V2 Erhalt uns, Herr, bei deinem Wort

BWV 6 Bleib bei uns, denn es will Abend werden was first performed on Easter Monday, April 2, 1725. Holy Week that year included performances of BWV 1 Wie schon leuchet der Morgenstern for Palm Sunday, the second version of the Saint John Passion on Good Friday, and, on Easter Sunday, BWV 4 Christ lag en Todesbanden and the Easter Oratorio.

Theological narrative
The gospel for the day is Luke 24.13–36, which picks up the resurrection narrative just after Jesus’ tomb has been found empty. Two of the disciples are walking on the road to Emmaus when a stranger joins them. They beg him to spend the evening with them; at the meal, as the stranger breaks bread, they recognize him as Jesus, whereupon he vanishes.

Bach and his librettist focus on the key quotation of the journey to Emmaus story—“Stay with us, for evening is falling and the day is far spent”—and explore it as a metaphor for darkness and light in the world of faith. The chorus opens in a sarabande rhythm with the oboes sighing and the upper strings pulsing unison eighth notes. The chorus evokes the historical narrative—the actual darkness falling at the end of the day plus the grief and anxiety felt by the disciples—as well as the dark/light contrast that the 18th century Faithful experience as they struggle through a world of sin toward salvation. Bach emphasizes the plea, “Stay with us,” with long drawn notes heard through the sighs and later piercing again and again the busy second and third subjects of the choral fugue of the B section.

The rest of the cantata expands on the theme of darkness into light. In the first aria, intertwining alto and English horn melodies over a pizzicato continuo create a personal plea from the individual believer who yearns for Jesus as light. The third movement recasts the Luke verse in the form of a 16th century chorale sung by the sopranos with a violoncello piccolo obbligato moving between bass and treble clef. The following bass recitative depicts the darkness on earth where sin often prevails.

The tenor aria opens with three motifs that I hear as elements of the journey of the Faithful on earth: angular duplets invoking the cross, cascades of joyful triplets, and a hesitant motif that suggests the uncertain plodding of pilgrims.

In the B section, the tenor picks up the joyful triplets on the “shine” of “Let your word shine on us,” and then, just before the solo’s end, an ascending melisma crosses the first violins’ descent in triplets. Here surely Bach intended to show the Faithful aspiring toward the light as the divine joyfully descends to embrace them.*

* The melisma is on the word “meinen” within the phrase “und dich jederzeit treu meinen.” Translations for this phrase are all over the place, from “may you at all times have faithful intentions” (Dürr) to “forever grant thy favor” (Ambrose). I think Whittaker’s “Thee always truly signify” seems closest to Bach’s purpose; that is, the light that shines brighter upon the Faithful should be at all times within as a signifier of God’s love.
Violincello piccolo

Bach called for the violincello piccolo in 8 cantatas composed between November 1724 and November 1725, 5 of them clustered during the 1726 Easter-to-Pentecost season. The instrument, smaller than a cello and larger than a viola, has five strings tuned in fifths from C (two octaves below middle C) to b' (B above middle C). Other terms include viola da pomposa and viola da spalla (shoulder viola). Scholars do not agree on whether the instrument was played upright, as shown in the 18th century drawing at left below, or across the chest, as shown at the right.

Dmitri Badiarov’s article in the Galpin Society Journal reviews the literature from Bach’s time to the present and adds his own perspective as luthier and performer. http://badiarovviolins.com/PDF/GSJ60_121-145_Badiarov.pdf

Notes on Tonality

Although the cantata closes in G minor, the opening chorus is in C minor, a key that one early 18th century theoretician called “exceedingly lovely but at the same time sad.” Bach wrote the key signature with 2 flats, just as he did for the C minor closing choruses of both the Saint John and Saint Matthew passions. The instability of the sixth step of the scale—sometimes A♭, sometimes A♭—creates an ambiguous tonality: the modern C minor scale (c-d-e♭-f-g-a♭-b) or b♭-c] alongside the old-style Dorian mode (c-d-e♭-f-g-a♭-b♭-c). This tonal ambiguity serves well as a metaphor for the uncertainty hovering around the grieving disciples—and around the Faithful striving to live a Christian life.

In the aria for alto, oboe, and continuo, Bach twice uses a harmonic progression that spectacularly symbolizes the movement from foreboding darkness into salvation’s light. On “stay with us, for darkness is falling,” the voice moves down stepwise over a progression from minor to major through dark, dark tonalities before turning upward into the cadence.

Note that the scale for a b♭ minor chord has 5 flats, for the a♭ minor chord 7 flats, which makes the progression fit well into 17th century tonal allegory, wherein the deeper one goes into flats, the farther one is from the divine.

Gospel for the Day

13 And, behold, two of them went that same day to a village called Emmaus, which was from Jerusalem about threescore furlongs.
14 And they talked together of all these things which had happened.
15 And it came to pass, that, while they communed together and reasoned, Jesus himself drew near, and went with them.
16 But their eyes were holden that they should not know him.
17 And he said unto them, What manner of communications are these that ye have one to another, as ye walk, and are sad?
18 And the one of them, whose name was Cleopas, answering said unto him, Art thou only a stranger in Jerusalem, and hast not known the things which are come to pass there in these days?
19 And he said unto them, What things? And they said unto him, Concerning Jesus of Nazareth, which was a prophet mighty in deed and word before God and all the people:
20 And how the chief priests and our rulers delivered him to be condemned to death, and have crucified him.
21 But we trusted that it had been he which should have redeemed Israel: and beside all this, to day is the third day since these things were done.
22 Yea, and certain women also of our company made us astonished, which were early at the sepulchre;
23 And when they found not his body, they came, saying, that they had also seen a vision of angels, which said that he was alive.
24 And certain of them which were with us went to the sepulchre, and found it even so as the women had said: but him they saw not.
25 Then he said unto them, O fools, and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken:
26 Ought not Christ to have suffered these things, and to enter into his glory?
27 And beginning at Moses and all the prophets, he expounded unto them in all the scriptures the things concerning himself.
28 And they drew nigh unto the village, whither they went: and he made as though he would have gone further.
29 But they constrained him, saying, Abide with us: for it is toward evening, and the day is far spent. And he went in to tarry with them.
30 And it came to pass, as he sat at meat with them, he took bread, and blessed it, and brake, and gave to them.
31 And their eyes were opened, and they knew him; and he vanished out of their sight.
32 And they said one to another, Did not our heart burn within us, while he talked with us by the way, and while he opened to us the scriptures?
33 And they rose up the same hour, and returned to Jerusalem, and found the eleven gathered together, and them that were with them,
34 Saying, The Lord is risen indeed, and hath appeared to Simon.
35 And they told what things were done in the way, and how he was known of them in breaking of bread.
